

Welcome to the city of As-Salt city! Built on three interlocking hills, As-Salt has a rich history and heritage. At the turn of the 19th, As-Salt was a flourishing trading town and it thrived in the early 20th century. Yet its history goes further back, as revealed by relics that include Roman tombs and an Ayyubid fortress. The city has retained its historic charm with quaint narrow streets, heritage houses built from yellow limestone and old staircases that link neighborhoods. The characteristic architecture features domed roofs, interior courtyards and tall, arched windows.

Soak in the beauty of As-Salt and experience it for the truly magical town that it is by going on a walking trail of the city. Accompanied by a local guide, or self-guided, there are two walking trails available:

The Harmony Trail

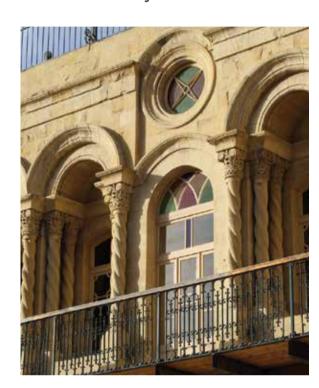

Get a feel of the interreligious harmony and coherence within the neighborhoods of As-Salt and visit the long-standing mosques and churches that have always stood together in peace. As-Salt is known for its sense of unity and community. Citizens rarely miss an opportunity to show their generosity and make visitors welcome.

The Daily Life Trail

Walk in a local's shoes and experience the variety of flavors, colors and textures of daily life in As-Salt by exploring the market area or soug. which runs along Hammam Street. Play a game of mangaleh, enjoy traditional bites, and listen to stories told by locals, and observe details of the city that tell a thousand captivating tales.

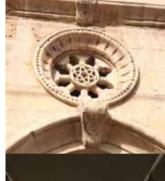

Historic Salti Architecture

There are around 1,000 historic buildings in As-Salt, built with the characteristic local yellow limestone in a unique architectural style. More than 600 of these buildings are registered and listed by the As-Salt Municipality. Arched windows are a key feature, and there are several styles as the architectural trends evolved over the years.

Dishes and foods of As-Salt

Bread is a staple of meals in As-Salt, and dairy products and preserves are popular, particularly for breakfast. Mansaf is often eaten at occasions, followed by knafeh for dessert. Some other dishes and ingredients are:

Bread: there is the thin 'shrak', which is a key component of mansaf, tabun, which is baked in a clay pot, and kmaj, a round flat-bread.

Magdoos: Pickled baby eggplant stuffed with nuts and chilis that is stored in oil; a preserve that no Salti home pantry should be without.

Jam: In As-Salt jams are typically made from figs, apples, grapes, quince, plums, and apricots.

Labaneh: Strained, salted yoghurt spread eaten on bread with olive oil.

Olives: Olives are pickled in water with salt, lemon, and green pepper.

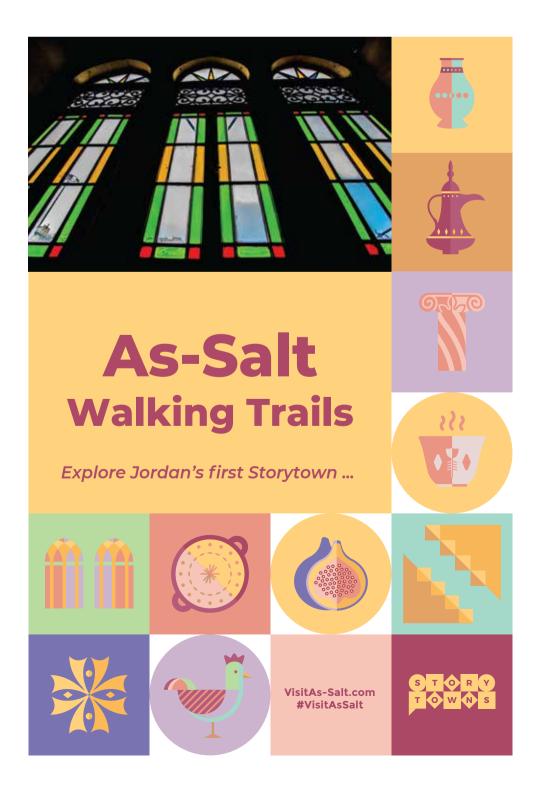

Rashoof: A soup of jameed with boiled lentils

Mjadara: A rice dish with lentils and onion. Lentil soup: Lentil-based soup with onion and olive oil.

Arabic coffee: Arabic coffee serving rituals are rooted in Jordanian tradition, and are a way to communicate with the host at happy and sad occasions. The host serves the guest just enough to cover the bottom of the cup and the guest has to shake the cup when he returns it to the host indicating that he has had enough.

Harmony Trail

Historic Old Salt Museum (Abu Jaber House)

Begin with a visit to one of the most beautiful, historic houses in As-Salt. The Abu Jaber House represents the city's era of prosperity at the end of the 19th century. It has been converted into the Historic Old Salt Museum, which gives a glimpse of the city's history and heritage.

2 Al Ain Plaza

Take in the colors, smells, textures and sounds of Al Ain Plaza, As-Salt's downtown area. It was originally a meeting point for traders, and today residents meet here to chat or play the traditional game of mangaleh. Al Ain means 'spring' in Arabic and the plaza is so named because water from a nearby mountain spring used to pool here and locals came to collect their water from it.

3 As-Salt Great Mosque

This is the oldest mosque in As-Salt and the original building was constructed in the 13th century from mud and straw. The Ottomans rebuilt the mosque in the 1860s and then in 2007, what remained of he Ottoman structure was renovated and expanded into the new mosque you see today, which reflects a mix of modern and traditional architecture. The second floor has an area for women to pray, and part of it is reserved for the mosque's sheikh. (Visitors must take off their shoes before entering the mosque and female visitors must wear a head cover)

4 The English Complex

The complex was established in 1849, and served as a hub for various activities. The complex combined a school for children, the first hospital in Jordan, the Church of the Good Shepherd and a school for religious lessons. It treated patients during the two world wars, Palestinian revolutions and the great earthquake that struck the city in 1927. The complex was built on the ruins of Roman baths. It has been used for a range of purposes including medical, educational, and religious.

5 Qaqish House

This iconic house was built in 1864. It reflects 19th century developments in merging urban design with traditional peasant house styles. The main architectural characteristics are the famous ceilings with crossed arches. The house has been granted to As-Salt Greater Municipality to be used as headquarters for As-Salt City Development Project.

6 Al Khader Church

Al Khader Orthodox Church and the shrine within it are the most visited place in As-Salt. The church is located at the end of Al Khader Street, a winding road along which can be found a variety of shops. The holy shrine was built over the remains of an old chapel that dates from 1682, where people believe many miracles have happened. In 2008, it is believed that the footprint of St. George appeared while he was pushing himself up to mount his horse. Muslim as well as Christians pray here.

The Small Mosque is the oldest standing mosque in As-Salt. Located at the end of Hammam Street, it was built in the first quarter of the 20th century by mason Haj Suleiman Abu Al-Hosson and financed

8 Roman Orthodox Church and School

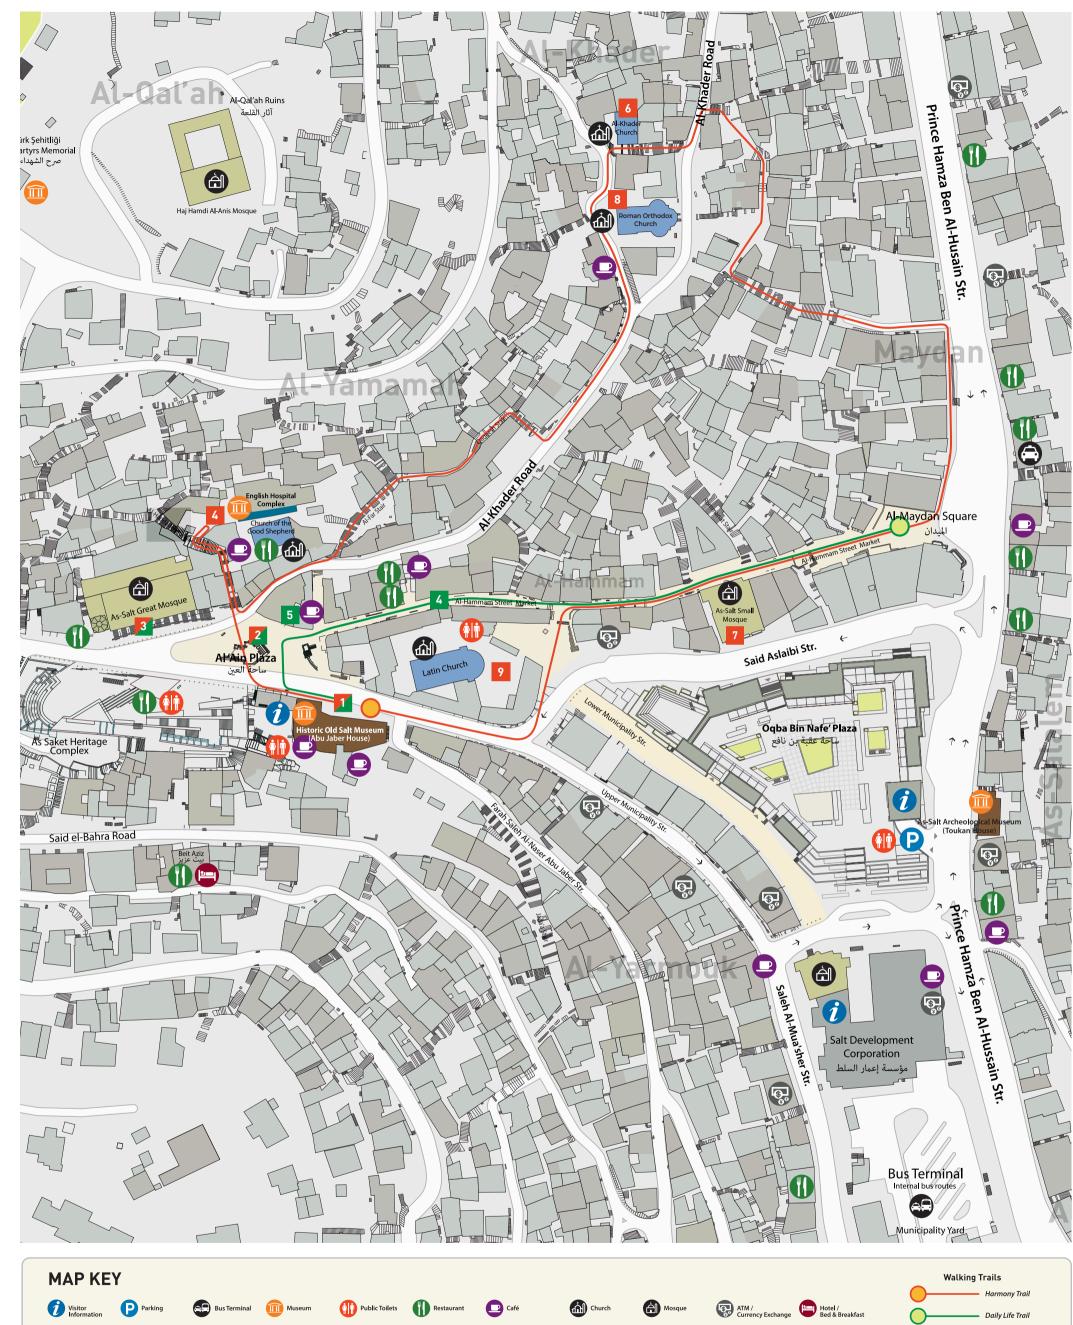

The church was built in the 16th century and the building has a school. It was the first private school in As-Salt and welcomes both Muslim and Christian students and teachers.

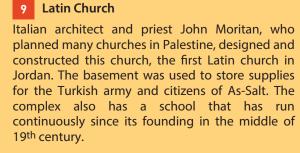

solely by donations from the local community.

5 Aktham's Coffee House

Explore the city's first proper coffee house, serving coffee and herbal drinks alongside homemade sweets and snacks inspired by Salti homes. The café is situated in a house a was built in 1881. You can't miss the original tiled floor and stone niches, which are spectacular features of this cozy place.

The trail starts with a visit to the following attractions, before moving on to Hammam Street:

1 Historic Old Salt Museum (Abu Jaber House)

2 Al Ain Plaza

3 As-Salt Great Mosque

Hammam Street

Hammam Street is a bustling pedestrian street in the heart of As-Salt that has long been the city's main market area. It is also the oldest street in As-Salt and was named after a Turkish bath (hammam) that used to exist there in the 1930s, which was frequented by locals. The bath is now gone, but the name lives on.

It has been the main shopping district in As-Salt for over 150 years. Built between 1884-1881, Hammam Street is a paved pedestrian zone. The community of As-Salt has preserved and supported its independent business owners, including traditional sweets shops, butchers, perfumeries, and spice shops. Along this street you will find:

Al-Eskafyeh (shoemakers) Stairs: Al-Eskafyeh is a stairway that connects Hammam Street to Al Khader Street. Eskafi means shoemaker in Arabic, and in its heyday this street was populated by shoemaker and repair shops.

Knafeh shop: The people of As-Salt historically made Knafeh without cheese. During the 1970s expansion of As-Salt, many people immigrated from Syria and Palestine, bringing with them their customs and influences. As a result, many new kinds of sweets appeared, and Knafeh with cheese is now common.

Qatayef shop: This is one of very few shops in Jordan that make gatayef all year round, a sweet associated with Ramadan it. This pancake-like pastry is traditionally stuffed with cheese or nuts and then fried or baked, and finally dipped in sugar syrup. At this shop you can make your own qatayef and stuff it with your filling of choice.

Iskandarani Cafe' and Osmali Restaurants: Located in a renovated heritage spaces that was built in the 1800's, and with their unique décor, traditional music, and local flavors, visitors are engulfed in the traditions and heritage of As-Salt the minute they begin the climb up the walkway that leads to the café and restaurants.

Awameh shop: This shop, established in 1887 and sells local sweets, including fried, syrupy dough balls called awameh.

Grocery: Locals shop here daily for all their needs, including pantry ingredients, vegetables, and more.

Perfume shop: Salti people use perfume in day-to-day life and for special occasions. This shop can mix up your perfume of choice.

Tobacco shop: This shop sells natural tobacco, which doesn't contain synthetic materials. Locally, tobacco is known as 'heishi'. It was grown in the outskirts of the city. A traditional scale is still used here to weigh the tobacco.

Attar (Spice Shop): Locals buy their herbs and spices from the attar and many people continue to use herbs for their medical uses. For example, sage is used to treat digestive problems and thyme is taken to treat respiratory ailments.

Vegetables market: the vegetable shop is full of fresh vegetables and active sellers. Traditionally, buying vegetables was the men's task. Grapes, figs and mulberries are grown in the area. Most come from the Jordan Valley.
